

Skills & Knowledge progression: History

National Curriculum – Aims and purpose	School aims - skills, attitudes and knowledge that we would like all children to develop on their journey through the school
Purpose of study A high-quality history education will help pupils gain a coherent knowledge and understanding of Britain's past and that of the wider world. It should inspire pupils' curiosity to know more about the past. Teaching should equip pupils to ask perceptive questions, think critically, weigh evidence, sift arguments, and develop perspective and judgement. History helps pupils to understand the complexity of people's lives, the process of change, the diversity of societies and relationships between different groups, as well as their own identity and the challenges of their time. Aims The national curriculum for history aims to ensure that all pupils: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - know and understand the history of these islands as a coherent, chronological narrative, from the earliest times to the present day: how people's lives have shaped this nation and how Britain has influenced and been influenced by the wider world - know and understand significant aspects of the history of the wider world: the nature of ancient civilisations; the expansion and dissolution of empires; characteristic features of past non-European societies; achievements and follies of mankind - gain and deploy a historically grounded understanding of abstract terms such as 'empire', 'civilisation', 'parliament' and 'peasantry' - understand historical concepts such as continuity and change, cause and consequence, similarity, difference and significance, and use them to make connections, draw contrasts, analyse trends, frame historically-valid questions and create their own structured accounts, including written narratives and analyses - understand the methods of historical enquiry, including how evidence is used rigorously to make historical claims, and discern how and why contrasting arguments and interpretations of the past have been constructed - gain historical perspective by placing their growing knowledge into different contexts, understanding the connections between local, regional, national and international history; between cultural, economic, military, political, religious and social history; and between short- and long-term timescales. 	We want our children to have a deep understanding of history by the time they leave our school. They need to be able to put historical events into context and order. They need to understand how and why events in the past have shaped the modern world and our place within it. And they need to have had first hand experiences of 'meeting' significant places, objects and artefacts so that history can come to life for them. In order to do all of that, our children need access to a rich, carefully structured history curriculum. In Years 1 and 2 we explore a variety of major historical events such as The Great Fire of London and The Industrial Revolution that have had profound impacts on modern life. To support children in beginning to recognise why an understanding of history is so important children learn about people who have lived significant lives. Stapleford is a small rural, Church of England school in Hertfordshire. It was therefore considered important to develop a culturally rich curriculum that included significant lives from black history e.g. Rosa Parks, Martin Luther King. Equality was considered whilst designing our curriculum and the significant lives of strong women were included e.g. Grace Darling, Florence Nightingale. Our School is surrounded on three sides by farmland. The impact on our area of the "Industrial Revolution" was chosen as our local study and Jethro Tull was chosen as a significant life to study because of his role in the agricultural revolution and Stapleford's rural locality. Moving through Key Stage 2, the focus moves to building-up a picture of the early history of the British Isles, from the Stone Age, Bronze Age and Iron Ages to Roman rule, Anglo-Saxon settlement and Viking invasions. Alongside this, children also learn about events and changes in the world beyond our shores (including the Ancient Egyptians and the Ancient Greeks) and a key turning point in more modern history (the Battle of Britain). The history of Hatfield House was chosen as the local historical study because of its' proximity to Stapleford (10 miles away) and the link with The Tudors topic. Creating a culturally rich curriculum was an influencing factor when The Kingdom of Benin was selected as one of our topics to be taught in Key Stage 2. The children learn about specific parts of the Second World War due to the huge impact it had on the world. Throughout this chronological journey, we are constantly developing a sense of historical order and 'scale' as well as equipping our children with the skills of questioning, enquiry, evaluation and interpretation needed to be a good historian.

Milestones:

At Stapleford Primary School children are taught in mixed age classes e.g. Years 1 & 2 together etc. Our curriculum sets out progression in the form of three 'Milestones'. The children work towards each Milestone for two years. During the first year pupils attain an understanding of the skills set out in the Milestone and during the second year they develop an advanced or deeper understanding. Each Milestone contains a range of descriptors which provide details of the skills to be covered. Over a two-year period, students will become more and more familiar with these details by exploring them in a breadth of contexts. This helps pupils to "know more" and "remember more."

Links to learning in EYFS:	Links to other subjects / curriculum areas:	Experiences every child should have:
Communication and language <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Express themselves effectively, showing awareness of listeners' needs. - Use past, present and future forms accurately when talking about events that have happened or are to happen in the future. Understanding the World <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Remember and talk about significant events in their own experience. - Talk about past and present events in their own lives and in the lives of family members. They know that other children don't always enjoy the same things, and are sensitive to this. They know about similarities and differences between themselves and others, and among families, communities and traditions. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Art - exploring art from the period of history being studied / famous artists from this time and using this to inspire own work - RE - the history of major religions, the link between their spread / change and global events (eg. the spread of Christianity in the Roman Empire), religious beliefs of ancient peoples (eg. Egyptians & Mayans). - DT - constructing models and replicas of buildings, vehicles or armour from the past. - Science - the lives and impact of famous scientists. - English - reading for research, particularly original documents & writing to present and share findings. - Understanding the history of countries will almost always link to their human and physical geography - eg. rivers topic links to learning about Ancient Egypt when considering the importance of the Nile 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Visit significant national museums (eg. British Museum, Imperial War Museum, RAF Hendon). - Meets and talk to people who have lived through important moments in history (eg. WW2 evacuees) - Explore local museums to develop a stronger link to topics being studied ('we found this just a mile from where you live' ; 'this is what life was like in our town 100 years ago') - Have opportunities to handle historical artefacts and draw their own inferences and conclusions from them. - Experience what life was like in the more distant past through trips, themed days and (where possible) residential visits - Meet professional historians and talk to them about how they piece together clues to form a more complete picture of the past.
